

How to Use Syllabus

What is syllabus?

A syllabus is created in order to familiarize the students with the class policy and learning schedule. It can be considered a “contract” that both students and faculty must comply with. Students are encouraged to utilize the syllabus not only at the time of course registration but throughout the lecture period, as a tool to study systematically toward accomplishing the goals set by each course.

対面授業/Face-to-face learning

The syllabus contains the following information in the respective sections.

【Course Content Summary】

The overall content, aim, keywords, and how classes will be conducted are described here, including prerequisite and co-requisite courses, required knowledge and skills.

【Goals, Aims】

“Knowledge and skills,” “Thinking ability, judgment and self-expression” and “Independence, diversity and cooperativeness” that students are expected to acquire through the course are described here.

【Schedule】

Here you can check the planned content for each class, assignments required outside of class each week and the estimated time necessary for the assignments.

【Evaluation Criteria】

The weight of each evaluation item in the final grade, points of evaluation and the method of feedback on evaluation results are shown here.

【Textbooks/Reference Books/URLs】

Textbooks and reference books used in class and website URLs to be referred to are listed.

For books marked  you can click on the link to jump to DOORS and check the availability in the library. *See next page

【Class type】

In the case of “Online (e-learning)” or “Combination of face-to-face and Online”, the specific method of implementation is described.

【Remarks】

Additional information including how to contact the instructor is indicated here.

※As the Standards for Establishing Universities stipulate that “a class subject for one credit shall normally be organized to contain contents that require 45 hours of learning,” 90 hours of learning is required in order to obtain two credits. In addition to the 30 hours of learning in class, the remaining 60 hours need to be fulfilled through learning outside of class. Assignments to be done outside of class as shown in the syllabus are the minimum amount of learning required by the instructor and the estimated time, which may not add up to 60 hours. In that case, students’ independent and active engagement in learning outside of class is expected.
